Re: WT Docket No. 01-309
HAC Digital Wireless Telephones

Dear Ms. Dortch:

Eagle Telephone System, Inc., d/b/a Snake River PCS (“Eagle”) hereby notifies the Commission that it is in compliance with the Commission’s Hearing Aid Compatibility requirements.

As background, Eagle is a small, rural wireless carrier licensed to operate a commercial wireless network on various disaggregated frequencies in portions of Baker County, Oregon, Union County, Oregon and Wallowa County, Oregon pursuant to three broadband Personal Communications Services (“PCS”) licenses.¹ Eagle acquired these licenses on December 13, 2000, June 15, 2001 and May 24, 2002, respectively, and launched commercial operations on September 27, 2001. As of this writing, Eagle has approximately 550 subscribers.

Eagle is part of a consortium of small, rural PCS licensees in Oregon and Idaho conducting business under the “Snake River PCS” brand name. As previously reported, Eagle sells five handset models that meet a M3 or M4 rating (acoustic coupling).² Additionally, Eagle hereby reports that it sells two models that meet a T4 rating (inductive coupling): Motorola model V3c and Kyocera model K132. Both models are
